A jeep, on its way back from Repulse Bay, overturned near the Hong Kong Hotel Garage, Stubbs Road, shortly after 6 p.m. yesterday, and its six occupants were thrown out.

No one was seriously injured except the driver who had to be detained at the Queen Mary Hospital.

The accident occurred as the jeep tried to overtake a lorry. The occupants were a party of six Chinese returning from a swimming party at Repulse Bay.

FIREMAN FINED

A fireman attached to the Tsimshatsui Fire Brigade, Tse Tung, was fined $140 or 15 days' hard labour by Mr. Sainsbury at Central yesterday for stealing a watch and impersonating a police officer.

Prosecuting, DSI Waldron said at 1.10 a.m. on Friday Mr. J. J. da Rosa and a friend boarded a taxi in front of the Gloucester Hotel and the former accidentally dropped his wrist watch in the gutter.

This was seen by two young Chinese girls who picked it up. Seeing the girls picking up the watch, defendant claimed to be a police officer and asked them to hand over the watch to him. After handing over the watch, the girls followed defendant to Pottinger Street where they informed a constable who arrested defendant.

H.K.'s LEAD, WOLFRAM MINES MAY BE OPENED AGAIN

(By Margaret Bradbury)
Arrangements for the starting of work on the Colony's lead and wolfram mines may begin once again, depending on the report of surveyors who have recently been viewing the property.

It is estimated, however, that a huge sum of money will have to be spent on new machinery and property repairs apart from mine construction work before this can happen. The new and modern machinery which had just been put into operation at the Mines before the occupation were either destroyed, damaged or lost.

Verboten

Under an Export Control Order, published yesterday, it is forbidden to export wood oil and tin to the United States, Philippines, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama excluding Canal Zone, Salvador, Venezuela, Canada and Newfoundland.

Peanut oil has been added to the schedule of prohibited exports.

Under an Order published yesterday it is forbidden to load more than 500 cwt. of any rationed commodity on any vessel without the authority of the Ration Controller.

YOUNG GIRL ASSAULTED

Pleading guilty to twice having carnal knowledge of a girl under 16 and to assaulting her, Lo Man-sung, 38, cobbler, was sentenced to 12 months' hard labour by Mr. Sainsbury at Central yesterday.

Mr. H. W. Fraser, prosecuting, said the girl, who is 14 years of age, was a registered ward with the S.C.A. and was defendant's adopted daughter. The girl was last visited by an S.C.A. inspector on May 10 and found well fed and treated.

On the early morning of May 13, Mr. Fraser said, defendant entered in having carnal knowledge of her inside his stall in Tung Man Street. The following morning, defendant repeated the alleged offence. On this occasion, defendant's 13-year-old nephew saw the incident.

Because the girl had told of the incident to defendant's wife, the cobbler kicked the girl on her left thigh on May 17. The girl made a report to the S.C.A. on May 20 and was subsequently examined by a doctor who testified that the girl was 14 years and six months old.

HAD RIFLE AND OPIUM DEN

A raid conducted by Inspector M. Mattinson on Shed 69, Yi Chung, Tai O, on May 23, resulted in Lai Chat-yau, married woman, being charged before Mr. Latimer at Kowloon yesterday with possession of a rifle and with keeping an opium den.

The rifle, said Inspector Orem, was an old Chinese one left with defendant by a male relative about two years ago. It was in a workable condition. On the first count, accused was fined $100 and $150 on the second. The rifle was ordered to be confiscated, as were the three pipes, five pipe heads, two lamps, and tin of opium dross seized.

The four smokers arrested on the premises did not surrender to their bail of $25 when their names were called.

LOCAL ESTATES

Local estate to the value of $11,600 was left by Mrs. Elizabeth Sparke, late of 17B York Place, Boscombe, Bournemouth, Hants, England, who died at the Royal Victoria Hospital, Boscombe, on Jan. 19, 1944. An application for the sealing of a certified copy letters of administration has been granted to Mr. John Alexander Duke Morrison, Chief Accountant, Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation.

The late Mr. Robert Warwick of No. 81 Southfield Road, Middlesbrough, in the County of York, who died at the General Hospital, Middlesbrough, on Jan. 29, 1944, left local estate to the value of $28,000. An application for the sealing of a certified copy letters of administration has been granted to Mr. John Alexander Duke Morrison, Chief Accountant, Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, as attorney for Mrs. Lena Walker (nee Lena Warwick), daughter and only person entitled to the estate of the deceased.

Just under 30 miles north of Hong Kong on the New Territories frontier, and close to the village of Lin Ma Hang, the mines were worked by the Japanese during the war and have not been operated since. The Mine buildings to-day lie in ruins, several of them damaged irreparably and all are looted. Where once a thriving community of 10,000 Chinese employees and American engineers worked and lived are now only deserted mine shafts, with here and there rusted equipment still to be seen on the looted slopes.

The three modern bungalows which housed some of the Mines' pre-war European staff, and the hospital building opposite the towering Pak Kung Au Mountain, are desolate and have not been operated since. The Mine buildings to-day lie in ruins, several of them damaged irreparably and all are looted. Where once a thriving community of 10,000 Chinese employees and American engineers worked and lived are now only deserted mine shafts, with here and there rusted equipment still to be seen on the looted slopes.

Only two window frames remain in the office building which before had 18 large and small glass windows with wood frames. The only reason that the two frames now remain is because they were out of reach of the looters, being on the highest story of the building.

The Lin Ma Hang Mines was before the war operated under a Crown lease from the Government. It is believed that lead was first discovered in the Shataukok area more than 75 years ago and the main outcrop of the mine was reported to have been discovered by Chinese in 1915 during a search for limestone.

In 1917 a company was formed and the mine was operated for three years. A small six-stamp mill was erected but was shut down soon afterwards because there was not enough water in the winter months to operate the power wheel. The mine was subsequently operated by a private owner and later by a Chinese firm who took out only the highgrade ore.

30,000-ton Reserve

The present owners, the Hong Kong Mines, Ltd., took over in 1936 and management was taken over by Neilson and Company in 1937. Engineers who examined the property at that time estimated a reserve of 30,000 tons of ore blocked out, averaging 10 per cent lead and 1 1/2 ounces of silver per ton. Construction work was carried on and ore reserves substantially increased and the mine was put in shape to produce the required tonnage of 150 tons a day. The equipment was such that a capacity of 250 tons per day could be obtained with only a few additions.

The amount of output taken from the mines during the occupation has not yet been revealed by the Company but it is known the Japanese resumed actual mining in April 1942.

Money Market

The week ended yesterday in the local money market with Chinese National Currency down to an all-time low as it closed at 12 1/2 cents for futures and 10 1/2 cents for spot (for C$N5,000). Renewed rumours of imminent revaluation caused the further drop.

Gold was steady, though the price was lower at the close. It opened at $262.50 a tael, and closed at $261.82. Pinsters settled down to a quiet day with rates fluctuating only between $12.35 and $12.52, a 100. It opened at $12.45 and closed at $12.46. U.S. dollars were easier at $4.07, as also was Sterling at $14.30. Australian pounds eased off to $12.50.

MARINE COURT

A representative of the owners of the p.s. "Kwan Lul", Hong Kong-Kowloon river steamer, appeared before Mr. N. Garland in the Marine Court yesterday in the case of the master to carrying passengers in excess of the number declared on the clearance.

The number of excess passengers, given on the charge sheet as 95, was disputed, the defence pointing out that the Police did not exclude the crew of 47 and the permitted limit of 12 passengers from the count.

The Court accepted this plea, and a fine of $5 for each of 40 excess passengers, or a total of $200, plus another $200, was imposed, or in default three months' hard labour.

A junkmaster appeared before the Court on a charge of having no certificated coxswain and engineer. He was the Shang-sang of the motor-junk "Tak On", and he was fined $100 on each charge, or a total of $200, or one month in default. A fine of $30 or 14 days was imposed on Cheng King-chun, a fisherman, for using bright lights for fishing in a prohibited area.

Brothels Raided

Three raids on brothels were conducted by Divisional Superintendent George Lays and Inspector McMahon in the early hours of yesterday morning, and resulted in the appearance of two of the alleged mistresses before Mr. Latimer later in the day.

Chan Sam, 30, spinster, failed to answer to her bail of $300 when her case was called. She was alleged to have used the whole of the second floor of 63 Pilgrim Street as a brothel. On the premises, according to Inspector J. Orem, were found three cubicles and one "log" with beds. Three Chinese females and three Europeans were found in the flat at 12.45 a.m. when the place was raided. A recommendation that she be evicted was made by His Worship.

"Pent-House"
Chau Tai Mai's "Jolat" was a hut erected on the roof of 51 Pilgrim Street. In this hut were found three Chinese females with a European, an Indian and a Filipino male when it was entered by the Police at about 1 a.m. Chau was fined $200 and a notice will be sent to the P.O.W. to have the hut removed.

For keeping 6 Jordan Road, ground floor, as a brothel, 14 Suet-fong, 28, female, was fined $150 or two months' hard labour by the Magistrate.

Inspector Orem stated that the place was one of the most difficult to raid as there were two entrances to the premises. The brothel occupied the rear of the floor, while the other part of the premises were used partly as a shop and partly as a residence.

When raided at about 1.15 a.m. two women, a girl of 15, and some men were found on the premises. There was no suggestion that the young girl was being used for an immoral purpose, said Inspector McMahon.

Readers' Letters

Justice
Sir—The world has heard much about British Justice. Personally I have heard too much about it. Field-Marshal Kesselring, one of the world's greatest soldiers, has been sentenced to death by a British Military Tribunal. It was never even suggested at the trial of Kesselring that any British soldier or civilian suffered an injustice due to the actions of the Field-Marshal.

Major-General Tanaka Ryosaburo has been permitted to live. Why? If any non-hypocritical Christian patriot desires to alter my decision of regret at having served six years as an officer in the recent war, permit him to explain the above.

LABOUR CRISIS IN FRANCE

regime must remain in force till Dec. 1.

"Life in France is hard for everybody," Mr. Ramadier said. He added that if the nation were not imbued with a general spirit of abnegation, "all sorts of adventures are possible."—United Press.

LATER

Paris, May 24. Half an hour after hearing that the French Union of Gas and Electricity Workers had threatened a "go slow" strike, with a total strike to follow later, M. Ramadier's Socialist Cabinet decided at midnight to take over all the country's gas works and power stations and their staffs.

If necessary, troops will be called in to maintain supplies. The Cabinet decision followed a "fighting communique" from the union, announcing a go slow strike in the whole of the country which will reduce the amount of gas and electricity available considerably.

It is feared in Paris that the gas and electricity workers move may lead to stoppages in other industries or to some general action by the French Trade Union Organisation.—Reuter.

A decree nisi, to be made absolute in three months, was yesterday granted by Sir Henry Blackall, Chief Justice, to Mrs. Therese Maria May da Silva (petitioner), who sued for a dissolution of her marriage with Mr. Marcus Alberto da Silva (respondent), solicitor, on the grounds of adultery.

DOES RUSSIA WANT WAR?

I am just back in England after precisely seven weeks in the Soviet Union. That is a pathetically short time in which to learn anything of this vast land-mass, its peoples, its strange mentalities and twists and contradictions. But I have come back with one firm conclusion.

The last thing Russia wants today is war. Nothing could be further from what Stalin is aiming at now than conflict with Britain and America. Probably never before in their history have the Russians sought war less than today.

You can boil the issue down almost to such simple terms as trolleybuses, clothes and food. You've only to look around you in the big Russian towns to see the tremendous job of reconstruction, housing, feeding and industrialisation the Soviet have to do. There is an intense concentration everywhere to get on with the job.

How They Talk

And they're not content just to do the job and forget it. These Russians want to go on talking about it eternally afterward. Probably never has Russian national pride been at such a pitch. The average Russian is convinced he won the war pretty well single-handed, is equally convinced he must do a super job of overhauling the West in reconstruction.

Then, you very reasonably ask, why all this savage propaganda? Why the cur at almost nightly invective from Moscow radio? Why those really fantastic charges by Molotov about British designs in the Ruhr and aggressive American aims? Why, if the men at the top in Russia know the real answers, know that the chances of an immediate conflict with the West are remote, don't they tell the men below to pipe down? This, I think, is why. Reason Number One: The men of the Kremlin believe they can run Russia more easily if the country is convinced and united than if it is unconvinced and hesitating. It is easier for Stalin and the Politburo to keep Russia in the approved grooves if the people are keyed up solidly against some outside "danger"—however factually nebulous.

Soviet Communism, the one doctrine since Christianity to claim world allegiance, uses the frightening idea that the outside capitalist democracies are at all times plotting—the U.S.S.R.'s downfall.

Part Of The "Faith"

That's one reason why Soviet propaganda, frequently rising to vituperative heights against the Western democracies, will go on even alongside comparative diplomatic "harmony" with Britain and America. It's part of Stalin's considered domestic policy; it is part of the "faith". And the man in Russia's street is convinced by it.

President Truman's speech on the new American foreign policy line has underscored all the suspicions which this Soviet propaganda has already sown deeply in his soul. But don't get this wrong.

The Russian resents the new American firmness because he's a man in political blinkers: he's allowed to see only what his leaders want him to see.

My second reason for the attitude of the men of the Kremlin is this: the Soviet leaders, strange group of men with as good as no personal knowledge of the outside world and its culture, remain convinced in the classic Marxist tradition that Soviet communism and Western capitalism cannot live together.

These leaders do not believe that America or Britain will just take a decision and bluntly declare a preventive war against Soviet Russia. And they do not intend themselves to start an ideological war in the foreseeable future. But, as I see it, they do believe it is desirable on the cards that some spark inherent in the conflicting ideologies may by some sort of social internal combustion produce the explosion which will give communism its historically unavoidable victory over capitalism.

The Soviet leaders therefore intend to go on "probing the perimeter" round the Russian landmass, gaining their economic, or strategic, ends wherever possible without resort to actual conflict. If you ask Russians today what this directly aims at, they tell you they are establishing safeguards. When you point out that such a process has invariably led to safeguarding the safeguards, then safeguarding these again, they come back to the beginning "Russia doesn't want war."

Stalin Doesn't Know

What's to be done about it all? The illusion is great in the western world that the Soviet leaders are men with their finger on every national pulse, accurately gauging the slightest variation in the world political temperature.

In fact, I'm convinced these men are extremely badly informed about the outside world; their mistakes and misjudgments of Western European reaction after the war are evidence of that.

In my view the Russians are likely to be impressed with only one line of policy from Britain: the will to co-operate on all reasonable grounds, clear and unequivocal statements of what we regard as "reasonable grounds." And combined with this a quiet, unwavering and continuing firmness.

A Mystery Solved

Nearly 1,000 bodies of German soldiers, still wearing uniforms and steel helmets have been discovered in Warsaw public gardens by gardeners while planting flowers.

This is the first time German military graves have been discovered in Warsaw since the insurrection when they were killed—and a mystery of nearly three years standing is thus cleared up. The bodies will not be exhumed, but bushes will be planted over them.—Kensley Foreign Service.

His Nibs

THE MASTER SPEAKS: EXCLUSIVE

Hammond --- By Don Bradman

I first played for Australia in a Test match in December, 1923, in Brisbane, and we were defeated by a record margin.

From that time until the present I have not only played with or against the best players in the world, but have made a close study of cricket history.

I feel, therefore, that I am in a position to reply to a question put to me regarding the relative standard of English players over, say, the last 30 years.

Supreme Bat

Right-hand batsmen I will deal with first, and here I feel that England's two greatest of the period mentioned were Hammond and Hobbs, with a very slight preference for Hammond.

I admit at once that I saw Hammond at his best, while I only saw Hobbs when he was certainly past his prime. Hammond, I think, was the strongest player on the off side in front of the wicket. It has been my pleasure to see—no strong that often we had to station cover-point on the fence to keep down his scoring rate.

His only attacking weakness was a disinclination to hook a short, rising ball and a lack of forcing shots between square-leg and mid-on. However, there was no weakness in defence, and altogether he stands supreme as the classic Englishman of his period.

Patsy's Genius

Hobbs' batting was more complete, with a slightly wider range of strokes, but he lacked the tremendous force of Hammond.

Next I would bracket Sutcliffe and Hendren, the former taking such a high position more by virtue of his wonderful temperament than his stroke-making ability. This is not to suggest that Sutcliffe lacked strokes, but he did have certain limitations.

The genial Patsy Hendren was somewhat the reverse in that his game was modelled upon an effortless character. He was continually entertaining the spectators by the brilliance and unorthodoxy of his play, even though the same genius sometimes brought about his downfall.

I have seen Hendren tear fast bowlers and slow bowlers to ribbons, and I have also seen him when the bowler obviously had him worried and benten.

Sutcliffe could be beaten three or four times in an over, but at the end of that period would bat on as though he were the complete master, and so the one attribute to my mind off-sets the other.

Coming very close up I would bracket Hutton, Compton and Duleepsinghi.

It was a sad thing for cricket that Duleepsinghi's health was so fragile as to cause his early retirement from the game. I can still recall his wonderful innings against us in 1930 at Lord's, and I feel that had his health remained robust he would have gone on and achieved a comparable position in cricket history with that of the famous Ranji.

Hutton's Skill

His delicacy of leg glances and the fineness of his cutting were incomparable.

With regard to Hutton, it seems obvious that he is suffering certain disadvantages due to that unfortunate injury to his left arm during the war.

To me, it is a miracle that Leonard has been able to overcome his handicap and has carried on with such a marked degree of skill. The main occasion when his arm appeared to worry him was when driving on the off-side, because there always seemed a tendency for him to lift the ball.

There was a popular belief also that the arm injury prevented him from hooking, but I seriously doubt this, for the reason that in some innings in Australia his hooking was extremely good. Hutton is now a more brilliant player than formerly, but strangely enough seems to have developed short periods when his concentration falls him.

I fancy that the increased brilliance has at least temporarily brought with it a very slight weakness in defensive play. Even allowing for it, Hutton today may stand favourable comparison with the earlier masters.

Compton is a first-class example of a brilliant, natural cricketer gifted with a wonderful eye and ability to time the ball, allied to a foot-work and balance which carries him through circumstances where others fail.

Left-Handers

Denis enjoys a wide variety of strokes, and I suggest that he will be a better player still when he develops more confidence and when he gives full rein to his natural stroke-making genius. In Australia he hit his wicket on more than one occasion, a minor technical fault which could easily be eliminated.

I am certain that Hutton and Compton will both be finer players because of their Australian tour, and I will be greatly surprised if they do not add considerably to the lustre of their names in the coming years.

There have been many great left-handed batsmen, but during the period I am reviewing I suggest that two may be bracketed at the top of the list—Frank Woolley and Maurice Leyland. Woolley was the beautiful stroke player who delighted the aesthetic sense of the cricket lover, while Leyland was the man upon whom Yorkshire or England would pin her faith in a tight corner.

Fine Defence

Woolley favoured attacking the bowler, and for this attitude I admired him and only wish there were more players imbued with the same spirit.

In Leyland, England possessed an indomitable fighter who was a far better player than he looked from the grandstand, and who held up the Australian attack time after time when he was the last of the recognised batsmen.

Citizenship For Aborigines

From Leslie Brodie

Sydney, May 24.
The Western Australian Government is granting full citizenship rights to aborigines providing they can pass a test drawn up specially for the purpose by a welfare officer of the Native Department.

The natives are required to answer, under oath before a magistrate that they live a life conforming to the following standards:

1. Have you for the past two years adopted the manner and habits of civilised life?
2. Are you of industrious habits and of good behaviour and reputation?
3. Are you reasonably capable of managing your own affairs?
4. Are full rights of citizenship desirable for you, and are they likely to be conducive to welfare?
5. Are you able to speak and understand the English language?

Sixty three natives have answered to the satisfaction of the magistrate and have been granted full citizenship rights under the Act which was introduced in 1944.

News of the Act is spreading among the States 25,000 natives, and more apply to take advantage of it every day.—Kensley Foreign Service.

DEATH FOR BLACK MARKETEERS

Warsaw, May 24.

Black marketeers in Poland may soon pay the death penalty if caught. It is announced in Warsaw. A special commission which is examining abuses, alarmed by the fantastic extent of speculation in the country which is rapidly heading for inflation and famine, has decided to recommend the death penalty for serious cases and labour camp sentences for others.

The head of the commission is a man named Zambrowski, one of Poland's many "behind the scenes" powerful men, rumored to be senior member of the Soviet NKVD or secret police.

The two main pointers to any country's real position—bread and foreign currency—have suddenly showed serious trends here.

English pound notes are now selling in the Warsaw black market at 2,400 zloties—six times their official value. Two months ago the normal black market price was only 1,500 zloties. Nowadays one can see women searching shops in Warsaw for bread. Those lucky enough to find it are paying 250 zloties a kilo. Six weeks ago a kilo of bread cost only 35 zloties in a free market.

M. Hilary Minc, Polish Minister of Industry, in an attempt to stem soaring prices, has urgently recommended the Government to impose strict price controls, but it is realised that this in itself will merely intensify black marketeering. —Kensley Foreign Service.

INDIA DECISIONS

For good or ill, Lord Louis Mountbatten's proposals for arranging the transfer of power in India from the British Raj to the government or governments of India, have received the approval of the Cabinet. For the moment, the details are being withheld, but the leaders of the opposition parties have been informed of the principles which will be followed, and simultaneous statements in London and New Delhi are expected before June 2. Only one thing is quite certain at this stage; there is to be no reversal of the decision to complete the transfer by June of next year. British concern is with the alternatives offered as a result of the refusal of the principal communities to co-operate. Whether this further demonstration of Britain's insistence that India must find its own solution will jolt Congress and Mr. Jinnah into realising the importance and value of a compromise no one can say beforehand for certain. But there is nothing to suggest that Mr. Jinnah will agree to any formula which is at the same time acceptable to the Congress Party; and division of the country seems to be an avoidable consequence. The final results will go down as the entire responsibility of the Indian politicians. Nothing has been more striking on the British side than the way her leaders of all shades of political opinion have accepted the Labour Government's decision as irrevocable and have refused to give India any ground to suppose that in any important quarter there is any lack of good will towards them. The main parties in Great Britain are all agreed that the government of India should be transferred to Indians as soon as they are constitutionally prepared to take it over. They are all anxious that the transfer shall be affected in a friendly spirit on both sides, and that nothing shall be done to prejudice good relations in future between Great Britain and the new India. On this footing there has long been a valuable degree of inter-party unity upon Indian affairs. How easy it would be for Indians to be misled in regard to it may be seen if we look across the Atlantic to America. Would it be possible to mistake British motives in the Indian affair more completely than most Americans seem to be mistaking them? Even in quarters reckoned friendly towards Britain, the impression seems to prevail that "our Indian policy is a symptom of our post-war weakness; that we are leaving India because we have no longer the man-power or the money to hold it; that it is part of a supposed decline in our status from a Great Power to a secondary one. Yet in fact our post-war weakness, whatever it may amount to, has nothing to do with British policy. Emancipation had long been accepted as the goal. When, in the first Great War, India was represented with the Dominions at the Imperial Conference, and after it, with them upon the League of Nations, the implication was obvious. The was recognised as a Dominion in point; and, as soon as her people had equipped themselves for the task, she would become one in fact. Dynastic itself was conceived as a mode of equipment. The war has not quickened the process; on the contrary, had there been an

ATOMIC MENACE

By Scrutator

The Archbishop of York's motion in the House of Lords supplied what had hitherto been lacking—the occasion for an authoritative public discussion of the present deadlock regarding the atomic bomb. Ever since Mr. Grumyko on March 5 told the Security Council that Russia would neither resign her right of veto over the proposed international controlling authority nor permit that authority to carry out inspections on Russian soil, the road, towards any "internationalising" solution has been blocked. Nor have later elucidations by the Soviet Government been sufficient to unblock it.

The scheme which came before the Security Council had been evolved by U.N.O.'s special Atomic Energy Commission. Its basis was the plan suggested by the United States, but many months of international time had been spent in elaborating it. No scheme can be infallible, and particulars in this one might be objected to. But the Russian objection was not to particulars—viz., inspection to prevent breaches and sanctions to overcome them—with which no scheme worth constructing could dispense.

The Archbishop contented himself for the most part with stressing urgency. Sooner or later other powers besides America would have the bomb, and when they did, the psychological situation would everywhere become worse. It is obvious that an international solution would be harder to reach than now. For the moment we may be unable to avoid delay; but time is not on our side.

The Russians, meanwhile, air a plan of their own. It is that existing atomic bombs should be destroyed and the use of the weapon "outlawed." The unreality of such proposals hardly needs pointing out. The first would hit the United States only, and elsewhere would encourage the race for the new killing-machine, since every one in it might start from scratch. As for "outlawing" atomic warfare, the Kellogg Pact "outlawed" war itself; and we all know what came of that.

What then? Two speakers in the Lord's debate—Lord Russell and Lord Lindsay of Birker—favoured going ahead and forming an international atomic energy organisation with Russia left outside but free to enter if and when she changed her mind. Neither Lord Cherwell nor Lord Cecil expressly assented to this, though neither asserted an incompatible view. Yet very careful soundings would be needed before launching an attempt. Russia would denounce it as a hostile cabal, and try to frighten the smaller States from joining—not merely her satellites, but important neighbours like Sweden and Norway. If at the same time Communist wire-pulling deterred France and Italy, any Anglo-American initiative might incur in Europe a considerable defeat.

Factors Of Urgency

In trying to estimate urgency, various factors must be borne in mind. One is that almost certainly several more years will elapse before any Power but America has atomic bombs, and by that time America's may still be a stage ahead. Another is that science has developed other terrible weapons besides atomic bombs, some of which—notably what are known as biological weapons—are surmised to be at least as formidable. Thus an effective solution of the atomic problem—if any such can be conceived apart from a solution of the wider problem of war—might leave mankind just as much a prey to annihilation as if it had never been brought about.

Lord Addison, speaking for the Government, recalled the findings of the technical committee which advised the Atomic Energy Commission. They went to show that control by an international body, if agreed upon, is possible to carry out. Atomic weapons could be eliminated from national armaments, and a system of inspection could ensure that the rule was not secretly violated. This would be compatible with extending among the nations "an exchange of basic scientific information on atomic energy for peaceful aims," and with enabling it to be used for peaceful purposes. At the same time the technologists found that since nuclear fuel, whether for warlike or for peaceful purposes, was basically the same material, the two could not be automatically divorced; but there should be an active control to ensure that the use made is for peaceful purposes only.

It is evident that the close inspection which this implies must extend to the whole range of a country's industrial plants (including its war plants), the nature and location of which it might for purposes of defence be

CARNIVAL

By Dick Turner

"No buy that one—catch-um 'nother pot, lady—him my cuspidor!"

most anxious to keep secret. Thus, if it were applied to Russia, the defensive value of her "iron curtain"—which in this connection may be considerable—would risk basis of all-round peace and permanent goodwill, it may seem unlikely that she will accept the partial change implied in admitting inspection by the atomic authority.

May it not be that the attempt to isolate and deal separately with the atomic problem was a mistake? Lord Samuel observed that "in the long run there can be no absolute protection except the abolition of war." If the Great Powers reached a general and final settlement to remove war from the world, the atomic danger would be removed. Without such a settlement, it probably cannot be; and even if it were, it would but leave the field open for biological warfare and other scientific novelties in mass destruction.

General and secure peace looks at the moment so remote that to advise waiting for it may be thought a counsel of despair. But may not that, too, be an illusion? What has endangered peace hitherto has been the unrelated landslide of Russian aggrandisement. Once a halt is called—America has called it over Greece and Turkey—there is a chance of wiser counsels prevailing. The end of appeasement may yet prove the beginning of peace.

ATTICUS

The visit of the Royal Family to St. Helena on their way back from South Africa rekindles memories in my mind, for I have relations directly descended from members of Napoleon's staff who went from the island to the Cape after his death.

When I was a student at the Sorbonne, I boarded with Henri Motte, then a well-known historical painter and a veteran of the Franco-Prussian War. Although he made Napoleon the subject of many of his pictures, he regarded him much as I hope some Germans at least regard Hitler today; that is, as a man who caused infinite harm to the world and ruin to his own country. Yet up to 1939 more books had been written on Napoleon than on any other subject except religion.

The Royal visit coincided with the last days of Hitler two years ago. For him fortunately there will be no Longwood and no tomb with the words:

war it might have gone faster. Indian empire has never in the past been felt as a drain on our man-power; nor need it be now. On the military side it augments our mobile reserves; on the economic side it is self-supporting. Fundamentally, the motives for our abdication are of quite a different order; they are more we have judged it the right course to take. Britain has long since come to see empire, not as an end in itself, but as a foundation on which structures of freedom may be raised. No defeat wrung the admission from her; she developed it freely from her own free instincts. There is, however, an important sense, in which we are no longer masters of the situation. Having gone so far as we have towards the transfer of power in India, we can no longer linger half-way. India is administered through a varied multitude of officials, the vast majority Indians, though a potent few in the highest places are British. The fidelity of them all to British rule has been based on the certainty that it would endure through their lifetimes. Now they know that it will not, and that following the date of transfer they will have to look, not to the British Raj, but to Indians whose leaders have at different times been rebels against it. Obviously this transition phase must be demoralising for them, and the longer it lasts, the worse it will be. The entire working of the governmental machine might be jeopardised; if it lasted too long. Our hope and aim must be, when we go, to hand over the machine in good working order. The policy of fixing a date of transfer in advance must therefore be judged by its effect, not only on the politicians, but on the machine. For upon the working of the machine, depend peace and justice.

"I wish my ashes to rest on the banks of the Seine amid this French people whom I loved so well." Hitler's epitaph was written for all time by Walter Winchell, the American columnist, on the day on which Goebbels, and his suicide were announced to the world. It was: "Well, they've killed the right people this time."

Mr. Bevin Prepares

Mr. Bevin has stood the physical and psychological test of the Moscow Conference much better than even his admirers could have hoped. At one moment the strain seemed to be telling on him, and he had a slight recurrence of the ill-health which has troubled him more than once during the year.

He has, however, not only reserves of strength but a remarkable temperament which enables him to rise to a great occasion. Throughout the Conference his patience and his good temper were exemplary, and he has come back after more than many of his staff, most of whom found Moscow not only bewildering in the extent to which propaganda ran riot, but also quite different from anything that they had imagined.

Mr. Attlee And Cricket

With the opening of the cricket season I have noted queries regarding Mr. Attlee's prowess at the game. As I have said before in these columns, his interest in cricket is purely a game. He knows the finer points of the game, follows the Middlesex, and on occasions is ready enough to discuss his Cabinet in terms of a cricket team. But he has never been a great performer.

Elvo Attlee brothers went to Hallowbury and four to Oxford. Their school and university careers followed a close pattern. All four were in the lower sixth at Hallowbury; all four took a second in history at Oxford. None achieved athletic distinction. The exception was the fifth son, who gained his second XV colours at Rugby football and was in the second XI at cricket. Presumably his prowess at games interfered with his work; for he never rose higher than the lower fifth. Instead of going to Oxford he went into business.

The Eagle Goes Home.

After five years' continuous service in Europe General Mark Clark is on his way home. As Commander of the Fifth Army in Italy, he is known to thousands of British troops. He won lasting fame as the hero of the secret submarine mission to Algiers in October, 1942, in order to ensure the co-operation of the French in the subsequent landing. Although the team was American, three British commandos accompanied them and showed them how to get ashore.

During his stay in England General Clark became the prime favourite of Mr. Churchill, who christened him "Eagle" on account of his hawk-like countenance. Since the war this popular American has been head of the American Control Commission in Austria. He has seen

Russians' Fastest Plane

Massachusetts, May 23.
Mr. John Foster, editor of the magazine "Aviation," told the Aviation Conference here today that the Russians had the fastest plane in the world and that the United States had dropped to a "third rate air power."

Declaring that the United States air research programme had slowed "to snail's pace," he added: "We have witnessed an almost complete disintegration of the finest air force the world has ever seen."

"We have just learned from reliable sources that our late Allies, the Soviet Union, have jet planes based on the German model that had been clocked at doing better than 1,050 kilometres per hour."

"That is a load of 64 kilometres per hour over the world's official speed record held by the British," Mr. Foster added.—Reuter.

"CARDS ON THE TABLE" Forestalling Attack On Mr. Bevin Realities Of The Situation

(From Sylvain Mangot)

London, May 23.

On the eve of the Labour Party Conference, which opens next Monday at Margate, publication of the official pamphlet on Labour foreign policy under the title of "Cards on the Table" is timed to forestall any concerted attack on Mr. Ernest Bevin's foreign policy from his critics inside his own party.

The timing of the Soviet reply to Mr. Bevin's review of the Moscow Conference, which appeared last Thursday in Izvestia, is also calculated to provide those critics with detailed ammunition.

There is nothing in the Soviet criticisms which adds substantially to the arguments already employed in Moscow, or is likely to modify the reactions which Mr. Bevin's speech produced among his fellow Labour Members. Mr. Bevin's critics, on the other hand, are likely to find difficulty in refuting many of the telling points made by the anonymous author of "Cards on the Table," particularly when he tries to show that British foreign policy must be judged not by doctrinaire party principles, but in terms of existing realities of great power relationships.

The author of the pamphlet expresses in the name of the Labour Party the hope "that sooner or later the Russians will realise that the policy they have pursued since 1943 (elimination of Britain as an European and Middle Eastern power) is both impracticable and unnecessary, and that the existence of a Labour Britain as a stable world power is a protection to Russian security and a guarantee against anti-Soviet aggression."

Blowing Hot And Cold

Chances of this hope being realised remain impossible to estimate from London since the latest indications from Moscow can be said, with equal plausibility, to show that Russia is blowing hot and cold.

On the same day as Izvestia's unrelieved criticism of British foreign policy on Germany and Austria and revision of the Anglo-Soviet Treaty, reports reached London of a recent public lecture in Moscow by the well-known Soviet historian, Dr. Lenin, on "The British Empire Today," which appears to reveal a greater measure of Soviet readiness to accept Britain and her Empire as necessary and workable elements in the creation of a stable post-war order than any Soviet spokesman, whether official or semi-official, has displayed since the end of the war.

A possible explanation of the ambiguous trends of Russian thinking towards Britain, which is put forward by some observers here, is that those who are responsible for Soviet foreign policy, while evolving towards a realisation that it is more advantageous to treat Britain as an independent world power rather than as an appendage of the American anti-Soviet policy, are still obsessed with the notion that Mr. Bevin himself is an obstacle to an attainment of the sort of Anglo-Soviet relationship that Moscow seeks as the basis of a new policy towards Britain.

Wide Agreement

This would explain the continued attack on the British attitude in Moscow, both on the peace treaties and revision of the Anglo-Soviet pact, which may be regarded as direct responsibilities of the Secretary of State.

The Margate conference will reveal whether the Labour Party is any more ready than previously to draw a distinction between the "Bevin" foreign policy and the "Labour" foreign policy. At present, reception of Mr. Bevin's account of the Moscow meeting in the House of Commons leaves the general impression that agreement with the broad outlines of the present foreign policy is wider both inside and outside the Labour Party than before the Moscow meeting.

One of the outstanding points discussed in the Labour Party pamphlet "Cards on the Table" is how far the recently enunciated "Truman Doctrine" will remain the guiding factor of United States foreign policy. Passage of the bill providing aid for Greece and Turkey shows that the doctrine has survived its first test at home.

Further development of American public opinion about the doctrine will presumably depend at least in part on the success or failure of its practical application to Greece. If it is to succeed, the Americans after taking over the chief responsibility for Greece must achieve two things:

Difficult Task

Firstly, an early end must be put to guerrilla fighting.

Secondly, Greece's economy must be stabilised and a start made on serious reconstruction.

These tasks face the American military and economic advisers who are on their way to Greece with very difficult problems. The inconclusiveness of the recent Greek Army spring offensive against the guerrillas suggests that purely military measures are likely to be insufficient, even if reinforced, and a fresh amnesty for guerrillas, proposed by the United States, is considered likely to be a palliative rather than cure for the disease devouring northern Greece.

A far more far-reaching proposal that the United Nations Frontier Commission should operate from Salonika to maintain calm and order on Greece's northern frontiers has met with stubborn opposition from Russia herself and from Greece's neighbours, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania. Without their co-operation any frontier commission is likely to prove ineffective and their final decision will be a test of United Nations authority.

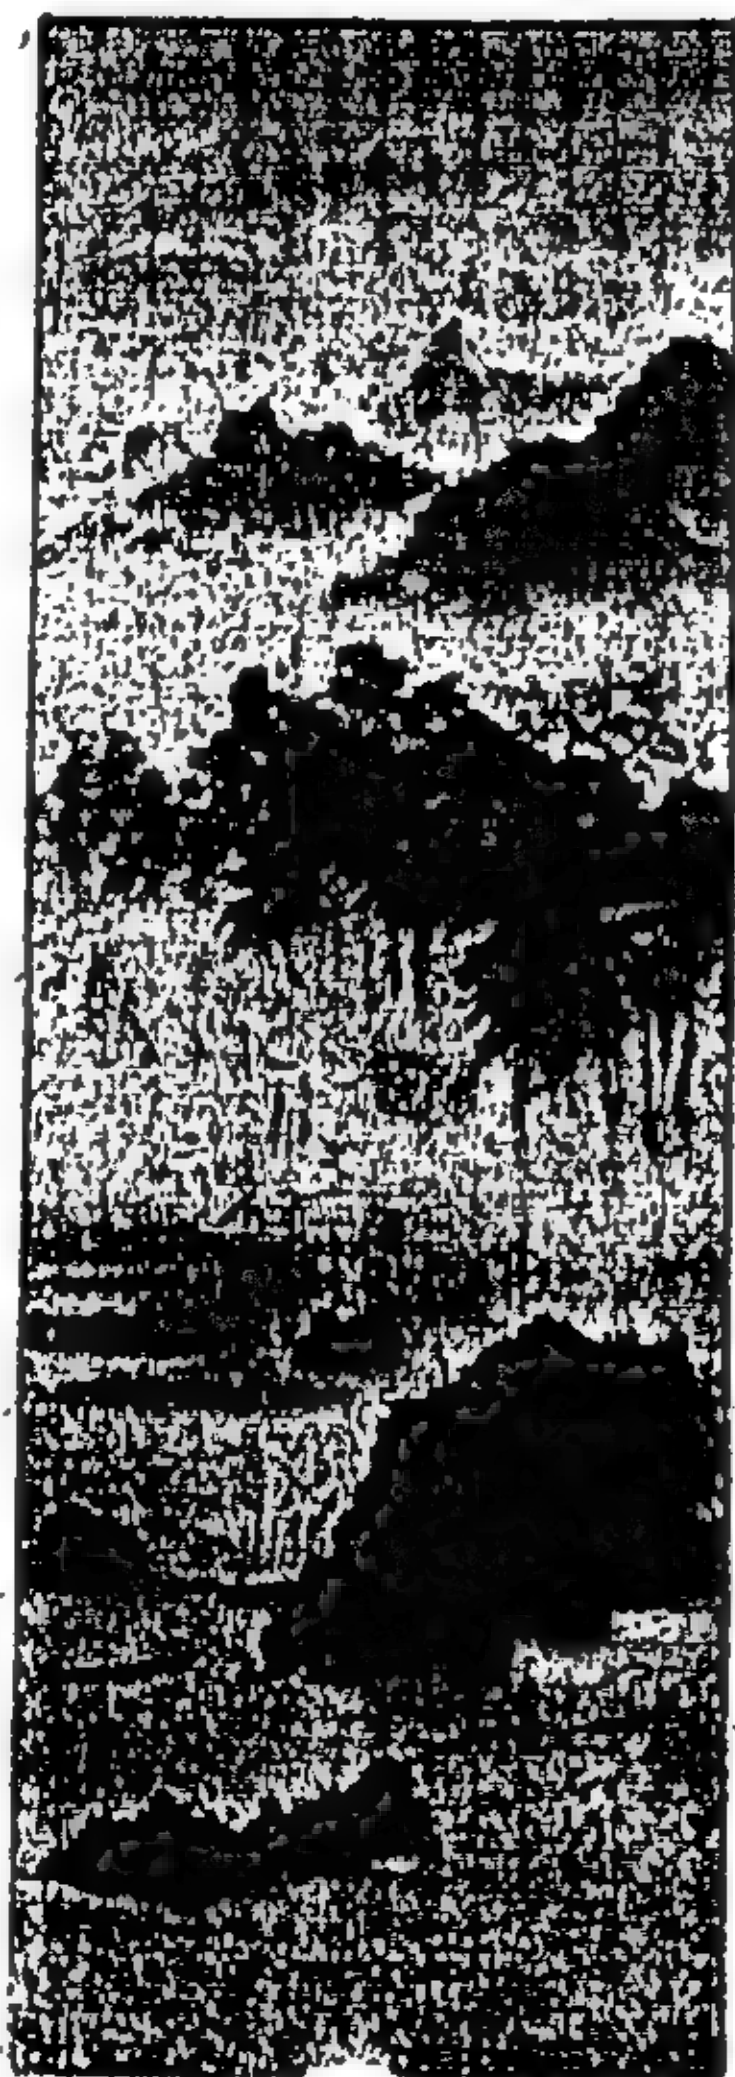

Test Case

Unless, however, some combination of military action,

'HE WAS A BIT SHOCKED

London, May 23. Four hundred and fifty school children got a half-holiday today while Royal Engineers defused a 2,000-lb. bomb dropped in a chrysanthemum bed by German aircraft on April 10, 1941.

Thomas Ginn, 77, in whose front yard the bomb had lain unsuspected for six years, said he was slightly shocked. "I have been digging in that flowerbed quite a lot," he said.

Five hundred nearby residents, as well as the school children, were evacuated during the defusing operation.—United Press.

political amnesty and United Nations control succeeds in stopping, or at least curtailing, guerrilla activity, the money which the United States is advancing to Greece for economic reconstruction may well be spent elsewhere, even if the elaborate plans proposed by the United States Economic Mission are adopted and agreed by the Greek Government.

Any obvious proof that American tax-payers' money was being poured out uselessly would in turn react on American public opinion and on further development of the "Truman Doctrine" for which Greece is the test case.—Reuter.

Offers To Cut Off His Head

Nuremberg, May 23. The United States war crimes tribunal today heard Oswald Pohl, onetime SS General in charge of administration of concentration camps, offer to "cut off my head and place it at the feet of this tribunal if I did wrong in doing my duty."

Pohl, charged with atrocities in connection with his administration of several notorious concentration camps, claimed that he had no alternative where Jews were concerned.

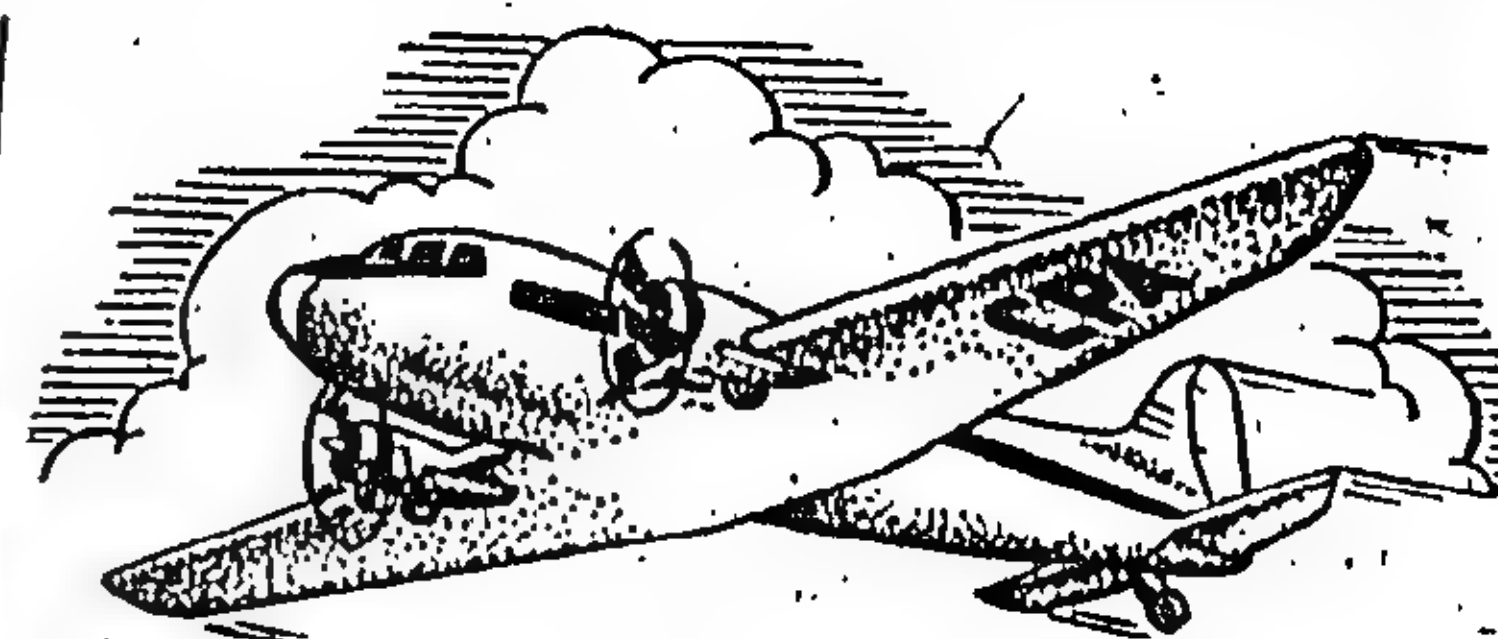

He said that in 1942 when he learned of the racial extermination programme, he had to choose between the Jews and Germans.

He said defiantly, "My country was at war and I could not desert her for the Jews."

Pohl admitted having been a member of the Nazi Party since 1925 and the SS since 1934. He added that he would have resigned from both if there had not been a war.—United Press.

BEHIND THE GREAT SMUTS THERE IS "OUMA"

From CYRIL WATLING

Fifty years ago in the parlour of old Japie Krige's homestead at Stellenbosch, then a hamlet in the Cape Winelands, a daughter of the house, Isabella Krige, was married quietly to Jan Smuts, a tall, serious-faced young lawyer who used to live as a student in the boarding house across the road.

The only guests were a handful of family friends from neighbouring farms. Jan Smuts and Isabella Krige, both children of farmers whose forebears had migrated from Western Europe in the early days, and sent their roots deep into the soil of South Africa, had met and studied together at the local college.

Farming Folk

They were both fond of poetry, languages, and philosophy. But most of all they liked the folklore and natural history of their own massive country. He wanted to be a farmer—she, a farmer's wife.

One day he said to her: "I would like to grow corn, but I would want to do something while the corn is growing." In these past 50 years he has done both in full measure.

Today, Field Marshal Smuts is Prime Minister of the Union, and a statesman of world renown, and Mrs. Smuts is South Africa's most loved lady.

But they are still farming folk. Their golden wedding was celebrated at Doornkloof, near Pretoria, on May 1.

The occasion was as simple in setting and atmosphere as their wedding ceremony. The guests were their six children and their husbands and wives, and 10 of their 20 grandchildren.

His $300 Home

Doornkloof, a rambling old farmhouse a few miles off the main Pretoria-Johannesburg road, is a modest home, a square-cut building, once a military barracks.

The Smuts bought the property for £300, and settled there when they left Stellenbosch about 40 years ago. Their home faces the great rolling Veld which they both love, and over which General Smuts—often strides for miles in solitude.

Mrs. Smuts now spends nearly all her time at Doornkloof. At 77 she still does her daily round of domestic duties as any other farmer's wife. She makes her husband's bed, and her own plans the day's meals, and as she sits knitting on the veranda keeps an austere yet kindly eye on her grandchildren romping over the lawns.

Royal Visitors

She is a tiny, slight woman with a perpetual smile in her silver-grey eyes. At Doornkloof she often dresses like a farmer's wife in overalls and flat-heeled canvas shoes. She neither drinks nor smokes, and she avoids cocktail parties and other functions organised purely for social pleasure.

Once Mrs. Smuts used to accompany her husband on political tours and help him in his campaigning, but now she lives more restfully.

She attended very few official functions during the Royal tour, but one Sunday afternoon the King and Queen and the Princesses drove from Pretoria to see her.

The homely routine of Doornkloof must have reminded the Royal visitors of their own quiet family life. General Smuts was away, so Mrs. Smuts had them to herself.

There was no formality, no ostentation. They chatted over tea, posed for snapshots, and walked over the lawns. She showed the King and Queen her autographed photographs of Queen Mary, the late King George, the Duke of Windsor, when he was Prince of Wales, and Marshal Foch. They walked through her library, which includes hundreds of volumes containing copies and clippings of every word written by General Smuts, every speech he has delivered, every broadsheet, every cartoon, and every comment, critical or otherwise, in which her husband features.

All his letters are preserved, all his journeyings recorded in those neat files. Her own letters and speeches she has destroyed.

Outside South Africa Mrs. Smuts's name is hardly known. She has never been to Britain, nor to any of the overseas countries where her husband is respected and honoured as one of the wisest of living men.

Although she prefers obscurity, she does not hesitate to move into the public eye when something for the common good can thereby be achieved. Even South Africans knew very little of her until the second World War, during which she organised a comfort fund for the Springbok Fighting Services and raised more than £1,000,000.

Moreover, many hundreds of men and women who might not otherwise have volunteered, enlisted as a direct result of her personal association with the nation-wide campaign to make conditions more comfortable for South African troops. After that she became known as Ouma (Afrikaans for grandmother).

Interned

It is from Ouma that the great statesman still draws much of his intellectual and spiritual buoyancy. She is still the pivot of his life, his counsellor and his companion. And it is not only Smuts who has benefited by association with her. She has the faculty of enriching the lives and thoughts of almost everyone she meets. Her secret is that she makes every person, no matter how humble, feel important. Even her servants she treats—as if they were members of the family.

In this cable from Cape Town, our Special Correspondent tells something of the quiet and charming home life of the great statesman and his wife and of the notable part she has played behind the scenes in helping him.

There has been a dark shadow in Ouma Smuts's life.

In the Boer War, while young Jan was leading a Commando against the British, Isabella was interned by the Imperial troops in a camp in Natal. When the war ended and the old Transvaal Republic of which Smuts had been Attorney-General, was no more, she returned home, deeply embittered by the tragedy that had overtaken her race.

Smuts, too, was bitter, but in a different way. He realised the essential futility of war. Boers and Britons had lost their lives through a misunderstanding which could have been settled by tolerant arbitration.

But he felt no malice. It took Ouma some years to attune herself to her husband's broad viewpoint. But attune herself she did. And ever since she and her husband have been among the staunchest and truest friends of Britain.

There is still corn to be grown, and still things to be done while it is growing.

BRIDGE By YARBOROUGH

The hand below from a round of the "Daily Graphic" tournament was of sufficient importance to seal the fate of a team which should have appeared in the thirty-two team final.

South, dealer.

S x x x
H A 10 x x
D A K
C A K x x

North.

S K 10 x x
H J 9 x
D J x x
C J x x

There are many principles concerned in the bidding. In the first place there is the fact that not only is the choice of the suit below a singleton a good one for an opening bid but also the suit below a doubleton. From this point of view One Club is the proper opening bid on South's hand. Indeed, I should go so far as to say that it is the only opening bid on the hand. After the partner's response South can "reverse" into Hearts showing his strong values without jumping the bidding. But are his values really so strong? A seven-winner hand with a minimum of two and a half "defensive" (i.e., "quick") tricks is one standard for a reverse bid; another is a four-quick-trick hand. Here there are five quick tricks but almost a total absence of "undergrowth" (Jacks, Tens, Nines and even Eights), reducing the value of the hand enormously. High cards promote cards of intermediate value into trick-taking cards, but if there is nothing to promote—no solidity anywhere in the hand—their additional value is wasted and they count only as so many tricks.

When South at one table opened the bidding with One Heart and North responded with One Spade, South, failing to realise the weakness of his hand in "undergrowth," jumped into Three No-trumps, and was two down. Perhaps he attached too much importance to North's response of One Spade. The one-over-one response, like the One No-trump response, can be a very weak bid. It can be made on as little as (say) Q, 10, x in the suit and (say) K, 10, x outside. On the next round the responder's rebid shows additional values. The material difference between the One No-trump response and the one-over-one response is that the latter is forcing for one round. The proper response by North on this hand is One Spade, showing his only guarded suit. A response of One No-trump on three unguarded suits is meaningless. The proper bidding is South One Club, North One Spade, South Two Hearts, North Pass (even the reverse bid).

A MILITARY CORRESPONDENT

discusses a Big-Four problem, and puts forward a suggestion

Ermaculated and bloodless, the figure of a man tied by hands and feet hangs from a leafless tree. Behind him lies a background of ruins. This is the subject chosen by one of Germany's leading artists to typify "Civilisation crushed by war."

The picture was hung in a shop window of a big German city, and its exhibition had official approval. A card by the side of the frame asked, in German, "What do you think of this?"

Apathy—And Then A Change

Many came to look at it, and they had only one thing to say. "Poor Germany... bound by England, Russia and America..."

That was a year ago. "Poor Germany." That was all they could say, all they thought. The Germans were resigned, apathetic. They did not want to do anything about it, there was nothing they could do.

The year has passed. A change has come over the scene. The people who expected to be fed and were ready to turn their faces to the wall if they were not have demonstrated and rioted for food.

Politics have got under way. The novelty of being able to speak one's mind in Germany has worn off.

The Cost Of Our Control

There are grievances in the land. From them are springing the underground movements... more trouble for the occupying forces, more expense, more restrictive measures and more grievances. The vicious circle is established. Hitler built his empire on grounds less promising than that which exists today.

Meanwhile, uneasy peace is enforceable only through power. That is the doctrine we are testing. But are we testing it in the right way? Is the scrappy and expensive control we are exercising in Germany worth the money? Is it achieving results?

Last year it cost £119,000,000, which is £39,000,000 more than was expected.

Nobody pretends that either we or the Germans have had our money's worth. We have nothing to show for it.

Now the Moscow Conference has ended. It was the fourth big conference to depress and bewilder the victorious nations.

In all conferences, the stumbling block has been the same—the future of the defeated foe. How much rope shall Germany be given? How much reparations shall be paid? How much industry shall she be permitted? What place shall be allotted to her in the reborn world?

If We Used Air Police

It has been thrashed out over and over again. Meanwhile time marches on. Something must soon be done with this nation of ninety million people, hacked into four shapeless parts.

Perhaps the moment will come when it will pay us to approach the problem with a fresh mind. Perhaps we shall need to ask ourselves again what is it we want from Germany, and how can it be accomplished quickly?

If it is true that the world seeks no more than a guarantee against aggression, then occupation by "foreign soldiers," the payment of reparations, and all else can come up for reconsideration.

Should such a situation arise, then it will perhaps be time to admit that Germany can be evacuated by foreign troops, and controlled from outside by air power.

If within Germany there was a civilian corps of inspectors with right of entry into every factory, the chances of secret war production would be remote.

If, in addition, an international air force conducted regular photographic reconnaissance—where in the hand their additional value is wasted and they count only as so many tricks.

But what would happen, it may be asked, if a manufacturer was discovered making the parts of a weapon, or setting up machinery peculiarly adapted to warlike purposes?

The answer could be an ultimatum: Diamond the factory within 24 hours, or have it destroyed by bombs through the air force—after warnings to the civilian population had been broadcast.

Breeding New Hitlers
The idea is not a new one, but we have passed so far from the realms of such lines of thought that its consideration may now be difficult.

Yet, if it is true that a vanquished nation occupied by the troops of the victors, is a breeding ground of future evil, we cannot ignore any remedy.

If air power, combined with civilian inspectors, can accomplish the one thing which the United Nations seek—future security for themselves—then why not consider it?

Shannon Systems

A NEW IDEA IN FILING

THE SYSTEM WHICH GIVES AT-SIGHT IDENTIFICATION AND ERROR-PROOF CERTAINTY.

SHANNOGRAPH FOR SPLIT-SECOND FILING—AND FINDING

First, it is flat-topped. That is, the top of each file is flat right across. That gives you a lot of space to use—name, address, telephone. And there are no tabs and the like to catch in the cabinet, wear out or THUMB-FUMBLE through. Your EYE spots any file at one glance.

"Shannograph" is not the ordinary suspension system. Every single folder is separately hung by steel hangers on a steel frame. The folders don't touch the cabinet. That means less wear-tear. More speed. Longer life. Less cost.

Shannograph will go in your existing cabinet or desk drawer—or on your desk-top, on a side table, counter or shelf. And it's moderate in first-cost and next-door-to-nothing in upkeep cost.

Fast—accurate and effective

COOLIE HAT... And Jewellery To Make

By EDNA McKENNA

silent overlay on one side to from 11s. 9d. to under 25, and stick down (see diagram). Cut out two similar pieces of cotton material, glue on either side of the piece of buckram, and stick down the overlays. Make a small hole in the top of the hat, draw two cords through and knot together on the outside.

The fashion for corollating cotton continues, and at a recent cotton show costume jewellery, dresses, hats, bags, and even shoes were made to match. Particularly attractive were the big coolie hats, the crocheted cotton turbans, fisherman's beanie caps, and the enormous elmet-cum-snoods of batting cut looked like chamois.

The costume jewellery is like to start a vogue. Chunky necklaces and bracelets of white cotton and felt were amazingly effective against a tanned skin, exactly right for wear with summer frocks.

A coolie hat would look de-lightful for the beach or sun-bathing. To make it, draw a circle the size of the hat required on a piece of buckram (I suggest a seven-inch radius, which gives a circumference of 44 inches), and cut out a quarter of the circle allowing suf-

Really smart and attractive hats in less expensive price ranges are to be seen again in the shops, and it is now possible for the woman of limited means to wear a fashionable hat without unduly straining her budget. At a special show of spring and summer hats the prices ranged

I saw these novelties in the various sections of the British Industries Fair which opened in London and Birmingham on May 5. Most of them will be in the shops within a reasonably short time.

A powder compact that does not leak; a toasting fork with swivel prongs; non-skid plastic table-mats in perapex containers, washable and colour-fast; an easy can opening—no tin-opener is required; a hole is simply made in the lid which can then be pruned off with a skewer or nail.

A new slide-fastener which can be used in a circular or zig-zag position, is flexible in all directions and cannot enmesh with contents; a novel shopping bag which folds up for carrying in the handbag when not in use; a basket cover which protects and hides purchases and also allows the basket to hold more.

JEWELLERY

The price of jewellery was saw was, of course, rather breathtaking, but if you have clever fingers you could make similar things yourself. Four balls of coral-coloured mercerized cotton, which I twisted, a dozen small gilt curtain-rings, and a chain-store brooch were all I needed to make a necklace of which I feel quite proud. And it cost me less than four shillings. The bracelet was made from two skeins of cotton, plus a brooch and a small piece of elastic which fastened the bracelet at the back and made it fit tightly over the wrist.

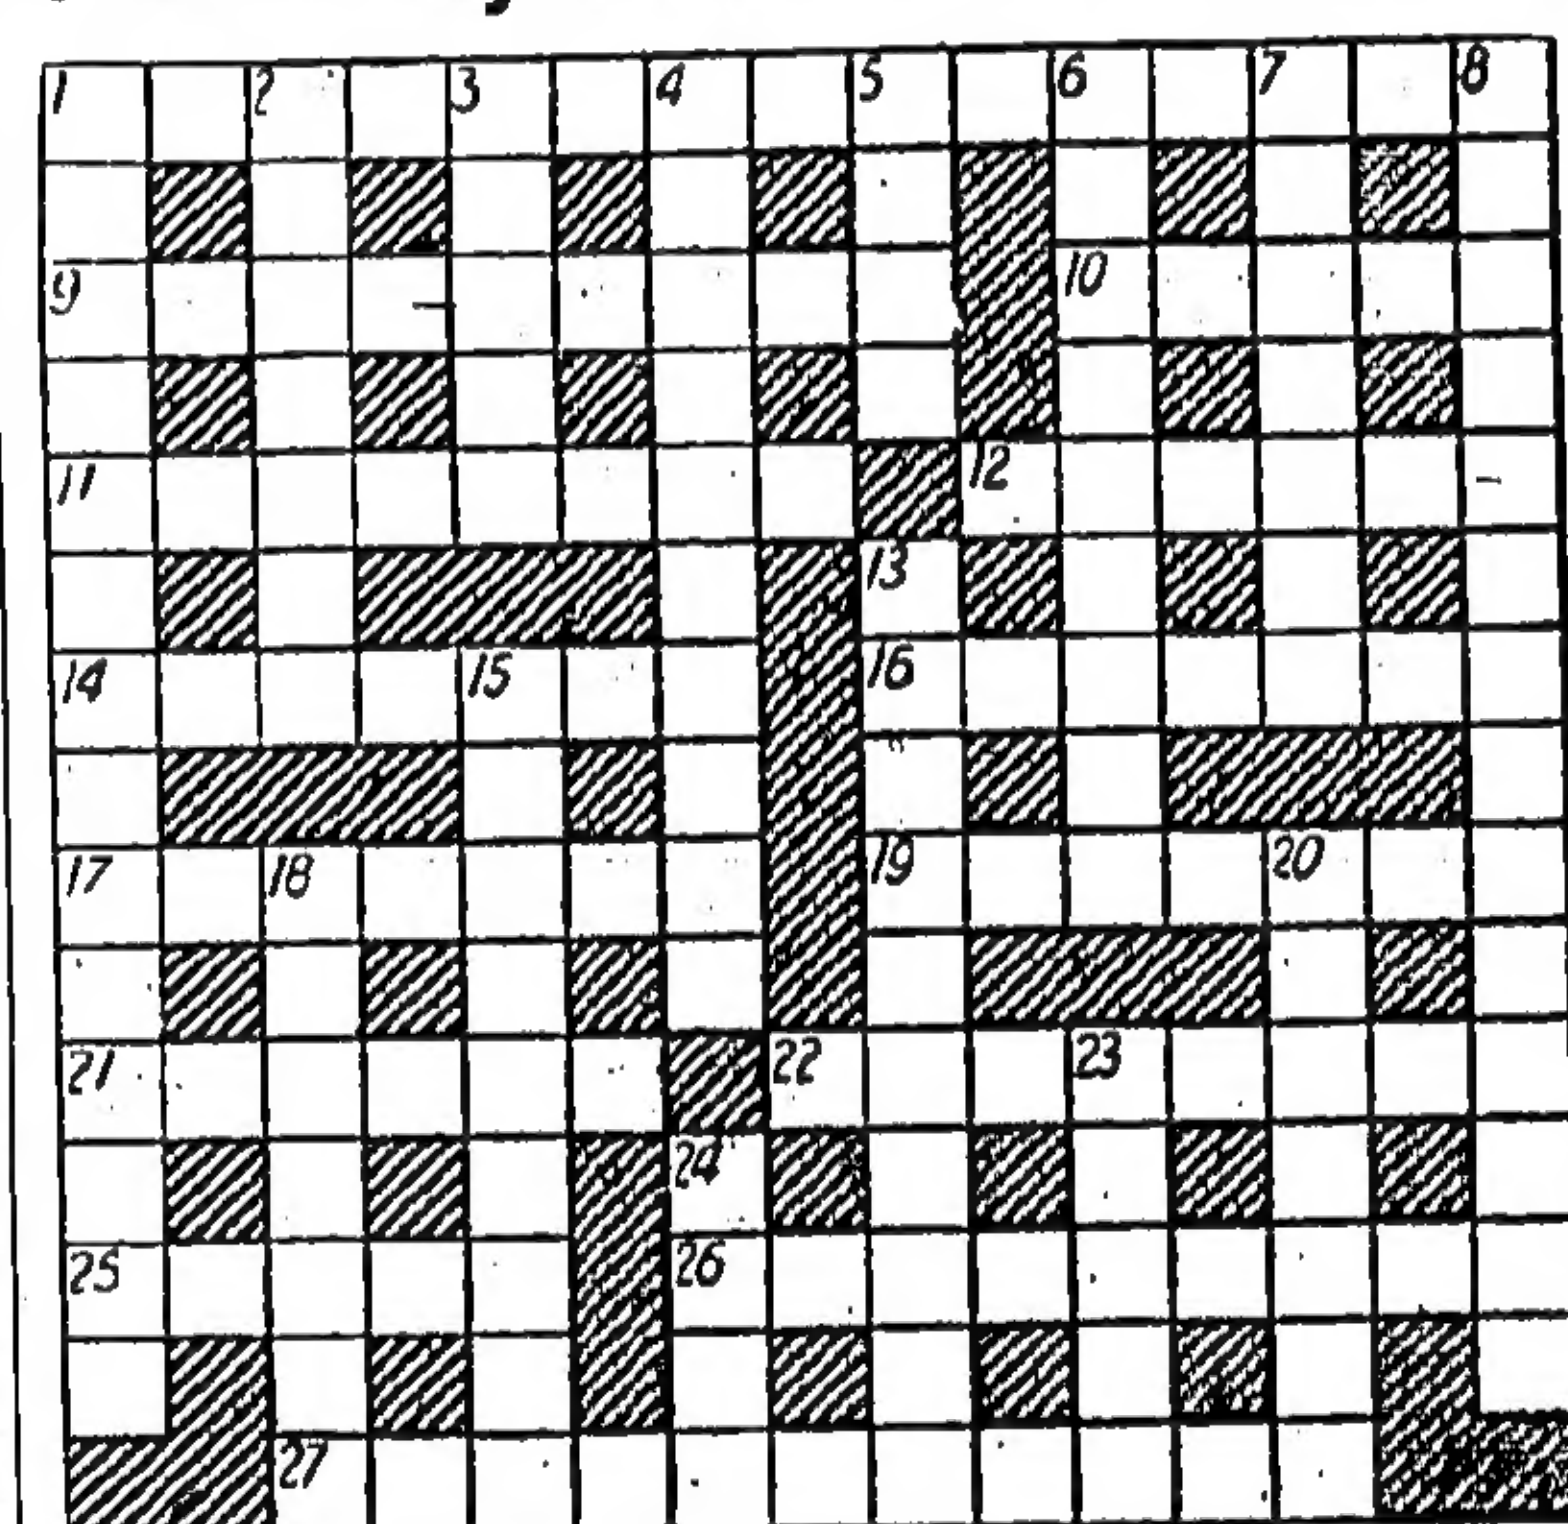

A plate-warmer which has the element bonded to the underside of a sheet of plate glass; a hot plate with simmer control, on a cabinet cooker, which permits gentle simmering as well as extremely rapid boiling; a new (Greiffel) cloth with 980 threads to the square inch.

A waterproof material without any chemical proofing; curtains made of furnishing net depicting the full story of the Battle of Britain.

Criticism Of Pope's Letter

London, May 23. A letter addressed by Pope Pius in August, 1944, "to the people of London and Westminster" expressing sympathy with the trials they had undergone and urging them to use their influence to mitigate the terms which it was becoming clear that the Germans would have to accept, is criticised in the preface to the Caderford's Clerical Directory for 1947 just published.

The Directory is a book of reference of high standing,

Make The Most Of Your Assets By Victor Mamak

All women are not born with a Maureen O'Hara nose—unhappily so—the same as all of us are not born with a Jimmy Durante type. The point is, no matter how Nature's own Artist has modelled the best of your features.

First of all find out what are your facial assets—not from your boy friend. If you are a spinster and certainly not from your husband if you are married. These two species will or should tell you that you are absolutely perfect.

So the best way is to find out for yourself the most attractive feature of your face. Look into your mirror. Remember, your mirror is your only outspoken and candid friend that neither flatters nor lies.

Shall we say your mouth is your best feature. Then accentuate your mouth, emphasise it, dramatise it, glamorise it, (can't think of more words that rhyme with 'ise'). Anyway the idea is to make it so attractive as to draw attention from the rest of your features on which nature has perhaps not smiled so benevolently.

R.A.F. DROPS TREES

London, May 23. In an effort to help the Japanese conserve and increase their forests, the Royal Air Force have dropped young pine trees by parachute in Yamabuchi prefecture, an Air Ministry spokesman said today.

One hundred and twenty trees, 10,000 leaflets and 2,000 gift vouchers were dropped.

Each town in the prefecture received 1,000 leaflets asking for cooperation in preserving the forests and the prevention of forest fires. Twelve trees which "finders" were asked to plant, and 250 vouchers which could be exchanged for free gifts.—Reuter.

Britain's Case At Hague

The Hague, May 23. The International Court of Justice heard Britain's application for consideration of her case against Albania over the mining of the Corfu Strait which led to two British destroyers being damaged with a loss of 44 lives last October.

COUP D'ETAT IN JAVA

Successful Stroke By Pasoendans

Kidnappings Of Officials

Batavia, May 23. The town of Buitenzorg, 30 miles south of Batavia, was quiet tonight after an early morning coup d'etat by the Pasoendan Party which succeeded in wresting the civil administration of the city from the Indonesian Republican authorities.

A decision is pending in Batavia as to who will administer its 60,000 inhabitants, while Dutch troops guard civic buildings in the city.

Briton's German Fiancee

London, May 24. Mrs. Gertrude Groesser arrived in London today by air from Berlin with her six-year-old son and was reunited with her fiance Richard Hasland after a nine month's separation. Hasland, a British soldier who was recently demobilised, spent his war gratuity and savings to bring his German bride and the boy to Britain.

Moscow Accuses Britain

London, May 23. Moscow Radio today accused Britain of recruiting displaced persons of Soviet citizenship for cheap labour.

"The British Government has decided to enrol in its zones of occupation about 100,000 displaced persons, mainly from the Ukraine, and refugees from the Baltic republics, for work in coal mines and agriculture," the radio declared in a broadcast.

They are being used, the radio said, for working British enterprises and agriculture, for service in the military police and the merchant navy.—Reuter.

GUERRILLAS IN FLIGHT

Athens, May 23. Brigadier Stylianos Maniakes, member of the Greek General Staff, today told a press conference that the main body of the guerrilla army was attempting to escape into Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria as rear guard troops covered their retreat. He estimated the guerrilla strength at about 9,000 men.

Brig. Maniakes claimed that Government troops killed 507 guerrillas, wounded 446 and captured 224 from May 6 to 22.—United Press.

INTERCEPTED BY NAVY

Jerusalem, May 23. A Jewish illegal immigration ship of about 400 tons was intercepted by the Royal Navy off the southern coast of Palestine this afternoon.

Naval ratings boarded the ship without resistance and proceeded to take her to Haifa.—Reuter.

STERN GANG DEFIANCE

Jerusalem, May 24. The Stern group, smallest of the Holy Land's Jewish underground organizations, will never agree to the partition of Palestine, a high spokesman for the group said today.

"If Britain imposes the partition of Palestine by force," he said, "and if there be Jews who surrender to it, we shall fight them both. A partition of Palestine would be a mere toy in British hands. We want complete independence. For this aim we shall fight until we have won or until we have been forever vanquished as a people."—Associated Press.

Marshall In Charge

New York, May 23. President Truman has directed the Secretary of State, General George Marshall, to resume over-all jurisdiction over the Greco-Turkish aid programme.

A Executive Order empowers General Marshall to delegate to the Chief of the Mission, as yet unnamed by the President, such power as he may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of the act and a basic agreement with the Governments of Greece and Turkey setting forth the conditions under which assistance is to be furnished.

It is understood that agreements between the United States and the Greek and Turkish governments are now being negotiated.—Reuter.

Britain's Plan For Two Indias

London, May 24. Despairing of Hindu-Muslim unity, Britain is prepared to divide India's 400,000,000 people into at least two and possibly five separate and independent nations.

British and Indian informants said that the Cabinet, anticipating the failure of a final plan for Indian unity, approved detail of an historic partition formula.

Lord Mountbatten, Viceroy of India, will place the new British plan before India's political leaders on June 2 in New Delhi. Before he does so he will ask Mahomed Ali Jinnah, Muslim League leader, for the last time if he will not change his mind and accept Britain's still standing plan for a single constitution that would cover all of an independent India, a plan that would unite largely the autonomous Muslim, Hindu and other religious areas under one central government.

A Flashpoint?

If Jinnah again says no, as he is expected to do, the territorial and political partition of India will begin.

Jinnah's answer has the potential of a flashpoint in Indian history, the informants pointed out, since the predominantly Hindu Congress Party long has contended for a United India.

Another Lynching In The South

Jackson, North Carolina, May 23. Twenty-eight hours after a self-confessed lynch mob was acquitted in a South Carolina court, a maddened band of armed white men entered a North Carolina county gaol and kidnapped a negro prisoner accused of attacking a white woman.

The negro could not be found and was believed to have been lynched.

Governor G. Cherry in Raleigh ordered the State Bureau of Investigation to send agents to this town near the Virginia State line and told the Federal Bureau of Investigation Director, Walter Anderson, to spare no effort to bring the mob to justice.

However, many hours after the negro was seized, officers had not found his body nor identified any member of the mob.

The gaoler, A. W. Edwards, said a gang banged on his door at about 2 a.m. and demanded that he surrender Godwin Buddy Bush, 24, who had been arrested four hours earlier. Edwards gave the men the key to the lock-up where Bush was asleep and they quickly took the prisoner out and hustled him away.

As soon as the men were gone, the gaoler called Sheriff A. W. Stephenson, who organized a posse. Surrounding farmlands and woods along the Roanoke bottomlands, they failed to turn up either the victim or the mob.—United Press.

No Day For Justice

New York, May 23. A renewed demand today for the removal of lynching cases from trial by State courts followed yesterday's acquittal by an all-white jury of 28 white men accused of lynching a negro, has been made.

The National Association for the Advancement of Coloured People, which would extend Federal Court jurisdiction to include lynching cases, earlier attempted to introduce such a bill, but was stopped by southern sponsors.

Generally speaking, press comment, even in the South, has not favoured acquittal while the New York Herald-Tribune declared that yesterday "was no day for justice."

Meanwhile, a posse at Fort Mena, Arkansas, which cap-

Flying Fort Crash

West Palm Beach, Florida, May 23. The wreckage of a Flying Fortress, last carrying 15 passengers, in a flight from the Panama Canal Zone to Kelly Field, Texas, was found today in Nicaragua, 75 miles north of Managua.

Earlier, United States Army and Navy forces had begun a widespread search over Central America, the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean Sea for the missing Fortress which was due at Kelly Field at 11:00 a.m. yesterday.

Eight of the 16 members of the crew escaped by bailing out. No indication of the condition of the rescued men has yet been given.—Reuter.

SIR ALEXANDER GRANTHAM

London, May 24. Sir Alexander Grantham, who has been appointed Governor of Hongkong, is to be entertained to lunch by the China Association on June 6. The function is to take place at the Savoy Hotel.—Reuter.

tured the negro farmhand, accused of killing a woman driver, with a knife, has rushed him away to another gaol because the sheriff had said that "crowds were gathering" and talking trouble.—Reuter.

Ostroumoff Has A Gala Day

Bright skies, excellent sport, a fine exhibition of jockeyship, fair dividends, and a most satisfactory attendance made the Whitsun Race Meeting (first day) of the Hong Jockey Club held at the Valley yesterday one of the most successful "extras" this year.

The deplorably small fields in three of the events (including the Novice Handicap for "A" Class Australian Ponies) were compensated by the larger number of contestants in the other five races.

With favourites in an excellent mood, dividends were much better than expected, averaging two to one in most of the races.

A. Ostroumoff took riding honours with his three firsts and one second in four mounts. He also had the honour of being responsible for the biggest pay-out ($300 on Shammy) and the lowest dividend ($6 on Wilhelm).

An other honour secured by Ostroumoff was Shammy's victory, time of 1:01 in the Murrumbidgee Handicap which is a record better than the record at the present time in 1941.

The afternoon's proceedings were enlivened by music provided by the Royal Marine Band of the C.M.C. British Pacific Fleet, under the baton of Mr. J.H. Gale, L.R.A.M., R.M.

Full results were as follows:

Mount Gough Handicap

Race 1, 2.30 p.m. (Unofficial).—For Hong Kong Services Race Club ponies. From the 1 1/2 mile post (about half a mile 170 yards).

Punters made a good start when they backed Autumn Rose (Newman) to the tune of 2,007 tickets for right from the word "Go" there was never a doubt of the ultimate winner of this race.

Taking the lead from the start, Autumn Rose had no difficulty in maintaining it until the winning post was reached. Jackie, following close on Autumn Rose, bore out wide at the bend but Jackie Crisfield's superb horsemanship enabled this game little pony to secure the second prize.

Duke II (Hessling) and Tony (Bramhall) fought it out neck to neck opposite the Public enclosure while Jackie was coming up strong from the outside. Tony caught the Judge's eye a few seconds before Duke II did.

1. Autumn Rose, 155 (Newman); 2. Jackie, 160 (Crisfield); 3. Tony, 145 (Bramhall).
Won by 1 1/2 lengths; a length.

Toowoomba Stakes

Race 2, 3.00 p.m.—(First Section).—For Australian ponies "D" Class and unclassified non-starters. Weight 130 lb. 1 lb. penalty for every 100 lb. over 130 lb. Jockey allowance.—From the Two Mile Post, once round and in (about one mile 171 yards).

Carrying over 70 per cent of the total Win tickets, Wilhelm made her debut on the flat course by annexing first prize money for "Collene" in what was practically a walk-over.

With the rise of the barrier, Ostroumoff gave his mount her reins until the Rock which he gave her a breath, permitting Blackie (Sequeira) to surge to the front. At the Village Bend, Wilhelm again took over the race and from there on was held under tight reins until she passed the winning post two lengths ahead of Souvenir (Rowlands), with Blackie another three lengths in the rear.

Jinx (Shih), the only other starter, was a poor last.

Murrumbidgee Handicap

Race 3, 3.30 p.m.—(First Section).—For Australian ponies "B" Class. From the 1 1/2 mile post (about half a mile 170 yards).

Another favourite obliged his supporters when Wodonga (Boyett) went past the Judge's Stand four lengths in front of V.J. Day (Hodgman) in what might be described as a canter.

V.J. Day took the lead from the start until the Rock was reached, when Wodonga went up to the fore with Elmer (Newman) third. At the Two-mile Post, Spanish Union (Y.K. Tai) made a somewhat belated spurt but could not do better than secure third position.

Nevertire Handicap

Race 5, 4.30 p.m.—For Australian ponies "A" Class.—From the Two-mile Post, once round and in (about one mile 171 yards).

Norse Queen suffered her third defeat of the season when she went down to Bashful Beauty (Hodgman) in this "battle of the giants" which only attracted five entries and three starters.

Jumping off to a good lead, Norse Queen locked every inch a winner until passing the Memorial Stands for the second time when Bashful Beauty, which had been drawing the leader all the time, drew level. Ostroumoff was unable to beat off the challenge to his mount, and was two lengths behind the leader when the winning post was passed.

1. Bashful Beauty, 153 (Hodgman); 2. Norse Queen, 150 (Ostroumoff); 3. Soukumpot, 140 (Pih).

Barraba Handicap

Race 8, 6.00 p.m.—For Australian ponies "C" Class.—Half a mile.

Burgomaster, the red-hot favourite, went off to a very good start and was able to maintain the lead until coming into the Straight when it was overtaken by Tootsie (Tang Man-wa).

Showing every sign of being tired, Burgomaster was passed, in turn, by Al Fresco (S.W. Lee) and Kookaburra (R.K.C. Chui). Opposite the Members' Enclosure, Kookaburra made a desperate effort to overtake Al Fresco but was still a head behind that pony when the winning post was passed.

Given full reins, Golden Wheel rapidly overtook Lola Sappola (S.W. Lee) and Jade Stone (Hodgman) with Hostile Witness (K.F. Chui) thundering behind. Coming into the Straight, Hostile Witness annexed second position with Golden Wheel still up the front. Jade Stone was third, many lengths behind.

TKO In 59 Seconds

New York, May 24.

Gus Lesnevich, light heavyweight champion, today blasted Melio Bettina's hopes of becoming a heavyweight contender by scoring a technical knockout over the aquat Italian in the 59th second of the first round—the quickest knockout in a main event in Madison Square Garden history.

The 32-year-old light heavyweight king felled his heavier opponent three times before the estimated 10,000 crowd had scarcely settled itself for the fight.

When Bettina was on the floor for the third time the referee stopped the bout without going through the count.

Bettina suffered brain concussion that kept him in a coma for a half hour after the knockout, although he was able to walk to his dressing room and groggily climb into his clothes.

Representatives of 20 nations will attend the meeting, including Avery Brundage and William May Garland of the United States, Prince Akel of Denmark, Lord Burghley of England and J. S. Edstrom and Clarence von Rosen of Sweden.

The Committee will confer with delegates from cities applying for the games on the third day of the meeting. It was reported that Chicago and Buenos Aires also were interested in making bids.

Shanghai Rice Price Record

Shanghai, May 24.

The price of rice jumped 30 percent in the last two days as Shanghai rice stocks continued to diminish rapidly.

The price reached a new record high of CN$420.00 per picul (US$35.00 at the official rate of exchange).

Merchants expressed anxiety over reports that the military was buying up supplies in rice producing centres which prohibited the exportation of rice.

Most shops are refusing to sell, claiming they have no rice left.

"BLUE BIRD" NEARLY READY

London, May 23.

Sir Malcolm Campbell, holder of the world's speed-boat record, said today that his new jet-propelled boat, Blue Bird, would be completed next week.

Sir Malcolm said he would make preliminary trials on June 8 or 9 at Coniston Waters in the Lake District, before trying to break his own mark of 141.7 mph, set in 1939.—United Press.

RAIN STOPS PLAY

Oxford, May 24.

Heavy continuous rain, which quickly saturated the pitch at Oxford, prevented any play on Friday in the South Africans' match against Oxford University and the game was abandoned as a draw shortly after midday.

Oxford, who overnight had lost two wickets for 19 runs needed 188 more runs to avoid an innings defeat.

Full scores were Oxford 303 for 9 wickets declared and 19 for 2 wickets. South Africans 510 for 6 wickets declared.

Associated Press.

Middlesex today beat Worcestershire by 234 runs in a county championship game at Lords.

The scores were: Middlesex 207 and 314 for seven declared. Worcestershire 214 and 163 (Edrich five for 68).—Reuter.

(Owing to bad reception other results were not received.)

Callover On Derby

London, May 24.

Quotations at the Victoria Club callover here tonight on the Derby were:

5 to 4 Tudor Minstrel, 9 to 2 Sayajirao, 13 to 2 Blue Train, all taken and offered. 22 to 1 Migoll offered. 25 to 1 Grand Weather, 38 to 1 Saravan, 40 to 1 Merry Quip, all taken and offered. 50 to 1 Tite Street offered. 60 to 1 taken. 50 to 1 Parisien and Cadiz, both offered. 60 to 1 Pearl Diver taken and offered.

Special place betting: 15 to 8 on Tudor Minstrel, 11 to 10 on Sayajirao, both offered. 6 to 4 against Blue Train, 7 to 1 Saravan.

With the Derby still a fortnight away there is every prospect that Tudor Minstrel will start odds-on favourite. This tendency was reflected in the callover tonight.

Quoted at 13 to 8 last Monday Tudor Minstrel found further support at five to four and after he had been backed to win $6,000 there were still takers at this price when business closed.

Following his success in the British Amateur Golf Tourney

Carnoustie, May 23.

Robert Fiegel, Glendale (California) commercial flying instructor, shaded a field of 216 golfers like an airport pylon today as the No. 1 favourite to return with the British amateur golf championship to the United States.

Ten Frenchmen and five Irishmen were among the large field, which opens play on Monday when Ted Bishop starts the first match.—United Press.

Dai Rees Wins Daily Mail Golf Tournament

Kilmarnock, May 23.

Dai Rees, young British international, won the first prize of 500 Guineas in the Daily Mail $2,500 professional golf tournament here today when the last two rounds were played. His full score read 68, 71, 72, 68 for an aggregate of 279, winning by two strokes from Norman Von Nida, Australian, with Fred Daly, Irish champion, third.

A brilliant final round by Rees set such a cracking pace that all challengers failed to catch him. He was level with W.J. Branch after three rounds, with 211. Nida 212, Daly, James Adams and Norman Sutton 214 being next, with another dozen players within three more strokes.

Branch cracked at the start of the final round, averaging five for the first five holes, and never recovered, taking 75 for a total of 286.

Daly went out brilliantly in 33 in a spirited effort, but took 36 home, while Adams and Sutton both faltered, leaving only Nida with a chance. This winner of two major tournaments this season returned a grand 69, but it was not good enough, though his 4200 gave him aggregate winnings of over $1,000 in three successive tournaments.—Reuter.

Five Champions

A recent injury will prevent Irish James Bruen from defending the amateur title won last year, but five former British champions are in the field, including Scotsman Alex Kyle, 1939 winner, who was 12-1 second favourite behind the United States contender.

Kyle's support came chiefly from loyal Scots, however. He was omitted from the singles selections for the Walker Cup test last week. One of the eighteen American entrants was Robert Sweeney, Miami, Florida, who is entered under the Royal and Ancient Golf Club banner.

An unlucky draw threatened to eliminate three Americans in the second round, where it appeared certain Ted Bishop would meet Smiley Quick, Sweeney would meet Fred Kammer and Riegel would clash with the Walker Cup reserve, George Hamer. Bishop, Riegel and Kammer were favoured to survive.

Frank Stranahan, who competed in last year's amateur, and Dick Champman were favoured to advance to at least the quarter-finals on the strength of their impressive Walker Cup performance and luckier draw. Stranahan will fly to the States immediately
